

MAJOR LEAGUE CLUBS TO RETRENCH IN 1918

Spring Training Operations Next Year Probably Will Be Conducted on Very Modest Scale.

INDICATION FOUND IN DRAFT

Seizure of Fewer Players Than Ever Before Shows Trend of the Times. Very Few Men Secured by Purchase.

NEW YORK, October 20.—From present indications, spring training operations of the sixteen major league baseball clubs will be conducted on a very modest scale in 1918.

The heavy cost of taking a big squad of ball players to the sunny Southland has caused talk of curtailing operations, and the fact that the clubs hold for the game, owing to the world war, there is little chance that the clubs will be able to spend money lavishly next spring.

A forerunner of the retrenchment policies of many leagues was found in the draft last September, when the major league clubs drafted fewer players than in the past ten years. The Chicago White Sox, for instance, did not draft a single player. Neither did the Pittsburgh Pirates, and other clubs drafted only one or two men, and before spring training time arrives next March there is a chance that some of the drafted players will be turned back.

The annual report of the National Commission, showing the players purchased from the minor leagues by the major league clubs for the season of 1916 and 1917 drafts, showed a total of 127 players who were taken from the big leagues under approved agreements, other than optional contracts. In this list the Boston Red Sox did not obtain a single player, and although he got the ball away, his flight was short and no goal resulted. The failure of several forward passes marked the closing minutes of the half.

MAJORS GET 100 PLAYERS.

In all the major leagues secured a total of 160 players, including both those purchased from the minor leagues and those drafted last September. Of this number it is said that not more than 50 per cent will be taken from the minor leagues. The cost of taking a major league club to its training camp and maintaining it through the season is heavy. The average cost of a training trip is about $7,500, and the clubs which have long trips spend in the neighborhood of $10,000. Through the playing of exhibition games in minor leagues toward the big league clubs manage to pick up a few hundred dollars on their way back from the training camps, but the net cost take in more than a sixth of the total cost.

Of the sixteen major league clubs, it is probable that at least ten will take much smaller squads south next March than they have taken in the past six or seven years. Only the best looking recruits will make the trips.

Along the same lines—the lines of retrenchment—it is timely to mention that the opening of the major league seasons next year may be set for a later date than ever before. A number of American League players and managers have predicted that this step will be taken at the annual meeting of the league, which is being held this winter, and it is sure to come up at the meeting of the National League.

Charles Ebbets, who has fought for several years to secure a later opening of the baseball season, has been named as the man to lead the fight. The National League confab with facts and figures to show the foolishness of delaying the opening of the season, and the club owners will have to listen. The fact that there were more than 100 players in the minor leagues during the first six weeks of play is expected to have a heavy influence with the club owners who have balked the plan in the past.

SCRAPPY TIGERS WIN GAME FROM SPIDERS

Then forward pass attempts were tried, and then came the second break of the game.

Mac Pitt, after Hampton-Sidney had been penalized for outside shot, rushed in with the speed of a young tornado, intercepted the pass and rushed the ball to the spiders' thirty-yard line before being tackled by Mac. At this juncture the spirit of desperation among the spiders became more evident. Line men stood up and tried to block the spider's defense, only to be caught up in the vortex of the assault and hurled aside while Jim Warren, Parrish and Jones ripped through them for steady gains.

Then, after the ball had been advanced about nineteen yards, Parrish once more was given a chance. He practically duplicated his last performance. He found his objective line at tackle and shied off to the end. There he cut in, only to dash further on once more. Men slipped from him as though he were greased, but they failed to slow him down or to stop him, and he again hurled himself across the spider goal, far out near the sidelines.

Ferguson, who looked on as Graham, who made a dandy catch, but even, success had gone to the head of the youngster, and he forgot football rules. He dropped the ball to the ground where a player was making ready to hold it for a try at goal, and the chance for adding an additional point to the score was lost.

After that the teams looked horns again and battled with only a bout even until time was called, the Tigers remaining on the offensive for the most part and meeting the spiders' few assaults with success.

There were no long runs made during the battle, those garnered by Parrish in scoring the touchdowns with a fifty yard run by Mac Pitt being the nearest approach to the sensational advances which have brought the spiders to their feet. The game was a hammer-and-tongs affair, with each eleven scrapping for every inch, with excellent generalship being shown at times and with punting being relied upon continually.

The exchange of punts probably was the most noticeable feature of the game during the first half. At the start the Tigers worked a short kick to the spiders at the west goal, from which direction blew the wind. During that period, Whittier took advantage of the wind and booted the ball consistently for gains. It appeared as though the spiders were perfectly willing to allow the Tigers to expend their strength in offensive efforts, and the plan certainly lost them nothing.

However, with the change of goals at the opening of the second period, Parrish had the aid of the wind, and he took advantage of it. The exchange worked to the advantage of the Tigers. Punt over the goal line occurred frequently, and for the most part, the play was in the spiders' territory. Fumbles also appeared at times, and kept the spectators in suspense as to just what was likely to happen as a result.

Creepy Sensations and Thrills. The first real thrill and the first real creepy sensation along the spine, according to the home fans, occurred during the second quarter, when the spiders at the west goal and Pitt had advanced a couple of yards in efforts to rush the ball down the field. Falling, he called for a punt. Whittier dropped

The local time of high water at the places named may be found approximately for each day by adding the tidal differences, printed in hours and minutes opposite the names of the locality, to the times of high tides at Old Point Comfort on the day desired. All sums greater than 12 are in the afternoon (P. M.), and when diminished by 12 give the usual reckoning; for instance, 15:47 is 3:47 P. M. Example: To find the times of high tide at Richmond on October 24, add eight hours and four minutes to 2:46 for the first tide, effecting 10:50 A. M., and add eight hours and four minutes to 3:14 for the second tide, obtaining 11:18 P. M. Any apparent discrepancies in examples may be explained when it is remembered it happens occasionally that the first high tide at Old Point occurs so late as to throw calculations based on it far into the afternoon or in such cases it is necessary to make the calculations on the second high tide at Old Point for the preceding day to obtain the time of the first high tide at the desired locality.

MISS HARRIS M. SHATTERS RECORD FOR PACING MARE

Covers Mile in 2:00 Flat in Defeating Hal Boy in Final of Grand Circuit Meet.

ATLANTA, Ga., October 20.—Miss Harris M. McDonald's bay mare, wound up the Grand Circuit season here today by shattering the world's record for a pacing mare by circling the mile oval in 2:00 flat in a match race with Hal Boy in the final of the Grand Circuit Meet.

She won the match, which was for two in three, in straight heats, her time being 2:03 1-4. The Piedmont Hotel cup stakes at $2,500, for 2:11 class pacers, was given by the judges to the bay mare, who won two out of the six heats paced. Second money went to Jay Mac and third to the Pointer Queen.

Jeannette Speed took first money in the 2:11 class trot, three in five, winning the four heats required to decide the contest. Miss Rexetta won second and Mandosa third. The 2:07 trot, three in five, for a purse of $1,500, was won by Bessie, Ross B. Took, second money, and Peter Chantilly third.

Because of the lateness of the hour only three heats were trotted in the 2:15 trot, and the judges declared Altona, Hal Winner of first money, having won the second and third heats, coming third in the first. Second money was awarded to Little Battle, the first heat. Frisco Worthy took third in this race.

Sends Warning to Virginia Hunters

Massachusetts Physician Pleads for Game Protection From the "Pot-Hunting" Sportsmen.

To the Editor of The Times-Dispatch: Sir.—Prompted solely by a very live interest in the conservation of game birds throughout our great natural game country, I beg to submit, herewith, a few suggestions that possibly may be of interest to the good sportsmen of the Old Dominion, who have a similar interest at heart.

In mentioning the fact that a Southern trip was in contemplation, to spend most of the winter, the trip to be made in a commodious motor boat, the question was asked: "Why do so many sportsmen travel toward the South for the sake of the sport, in good game Nature's domain."

Having spent the earlier years in the South country, where game birds were in abundance, most naturally it was impressive to note the great scarcity of the game in the beautiful, natural game sportsmen's domain, Massachusetts. The older sportsmen have told of the great abundance of game birds in the State, and it is necessary to enact effective game laws, to effect conservation afterwards, after the game has been destroyed.

The few woodcock that whistle by at night fly so high that they cannot be shot, and the sportsman's gun, as the ruffed grouse, one of the very finest game birds that fly, is going rapidly, the same course as that of the quail.

The motive that has prompted this, not encouraging, report has been for the purpose of sending a warning to the good sportsmen of the Old Dominion, less that game country become what is that of Western Massachusetts. A friend has informed me, without mentioning the identity of the hunter, that a certain man had boasted of having sold sixty-old ruffed grouse in his city, and this is the way of our game conservation, by law.

Yours truly, J. B. MACNAIR, M. D. Springfield, Mass., October 16, 1917.
